Objective
Students become familiar with five key figures in Chinese history and are able to say their name, tell when and where they lived, what they did to become famous and influential, and an interesting fact about each of them.

Evidence of Learning – Assessment

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Informal or Formal</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Informal assessments include teacher visual observations as students identify which tone they hear in newly learned words by using hand gestures. Teacher asks students to express their understanding of the meaning of a new word by saying its translation in English. During this check for understanding the teacher allows students time for metacognition and reflection if there is disagreement and provides immediate feedback on the correct tone. The teacher checks student listening comprehension by having students make gestures to indicate their understanding (using agreed-upon signals to represent the words). A variation is having students close their eyes and respond with such hand gestures to the words they hear, so the teacher can see which ones have and have not acquired the target vocabulary. Assessment of students interacting in pairs or teams during interpersonal communication includes “kidwatching,” as described by Yetta Goodman (Notes from A Kidwatcher: Selected Writings of Yetta M. Goodman, edited by Sandra Wilde and published by Heinemann, Portsmouth, NH, 1996). The teacher moves about the classroom and listens in on student conversations. The teacher records observations of student practice, notes misunderstandings or errors to emphasize in future mini-lessons, and guides students who need assistance or encouragement. The teacher assesses student reading comprehension by asking students to verbally read pinyin and Chinese characters projected on a screen or written on poster-sized charts, and when reading their storyboards. The teacher</td>
</tr>
gives immediate feedback by asking the student to read again, asking another student, or giving the correction. In the beginning stages of second language acquisition in Chinese, students are expected to recognize Chinese characters by associating them with English translations.

Student written production of pinyin is informally assessed by peers and the teacher reading their storyboard descriptions and giving oral feedback.

When students are presenting their knowledge either orally or in writing, it is based upon a teacher- and class-generated rubric. Refer to the “Strategies Matrix: Teaching Strategies for World Language Classrooms,” in Instructional Resources for this lesson.

Formal assessments will be conducted at the end of each unit of study to ascertain internalization of key vocabulary words and phrases.

Background on Teaching Tones with Color-coding and Kinesthetics to Aid Long-term Memory

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1st</td>
<td>“First tone – blue, up high, like the clear, blue sky.”</td>

Important Note: The Mandarin third tone is rare in normal speech. In conversation, it is cut in half, the “half dip,” and only the lower rising half (the second half) is heard. The full dip is only fully pronounced in a few circumstances:

- For emphasis
- At the end of a sentence
- List of individual words

drawn, also writing the Mandarin (characters and/or pinyin) translation of the blackline master. Students watch and repeat the words with the teacher, then read the words with the teacher once the words are written next to the part of the pictorial they describe. (The English should not be included, although students may add translation word cards later as a way to review the information.) This pictorial input chart describes and contextualizes one of the five historical and/or legendary figures of Chinese history who are the focus of this lesson.

Teacher will explain the process of the classic jigsaw reading strategy (see strategies list). The texts are used as the four expert group readings (see blackline master).

“Return to your seats to complete your learning log by duplicating the chart(s) and completing the “text and you” columns—three facts in the “text” column and an opinion, comment, feeling, reflection, or preference in the “you” column.”

Debrief in English

One way to debrief this input chart listed in the direct instruction section is to review it by pointing and talking about it again in the target language, but having the students say chorally, in English, what they think you are saying. That way if they are misunderstanding something, the teacher may correct, clarify, and reinforce the correct meaning. Another way is to have students give a kinesthetic gesture to show they understand specific words. Students — as a whole group, pairs, or individuals — may also point to the appropriate spot on the chart as the teacher says key vocabulary. The teacher may also choose to briefly “put on his/her English hat” or “click on his/her English speech” and ask if there are any questions or clarifications needed.

TPRS – Total Physical Response Storytelling AKA Teaching Proficiency through Reading and Storytelling

Circling is an intentional strategy to repeatedly expose students to the target structures and attune their ear to pronunciation. The teacher states this circling pattern in Mandarin Chinese with students responding and the teacher repeating as a way of affirming their statements.

“Circling” on the phrase, “Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history whose teachings help us make a good society.”

Teacher pre-teaches the phrase, making sure everyone knows what each word means and agreeing on gestures to indicate each word, such as showing a picture of Confucius for “Kong Zi,” pounding a fist in the other palm for “important,” pointing to the timeline done in lesson 1 for “Chinese history,” spreading hands outward, palms up for “sharing,” hands together like a book for “teachings,” and thumbs up for “good society.” Then the teacher starts to “circle” the phrase, with the students’ job only to make the gestures and respond in English or Mandarin to indicate their understanding.

The following is a short example of circling (which should go on for approximately ten minutes or when the teacher has repeated the key vocabulary in the area of 50-75 times) — focused on the teacher statements and questions — missing most of the parts the students either say or indicate comprehension of by shaking or nodding their heads, or making kinesthetic gestures:

[opening statement, circling begins] “Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history because he shared his teachings on making a good society.”

Is Kong Zi an important figure in Chinese history? [yes]
   Yes, Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history.
Is Kong Zi unimportant in Chinese history? [no]
   No, Kong Zi is not unimportant, Kong Zi is important.
Is Kong Zi an important figure in Chinese history because he shared his teachings on making a good society or because he ate lots of dumplings? [shared his teachings on making a good society]

Right, Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history because he shared his teachings on making a good society, not because he ate lots of dumplings.

Who is an important figure in Chinese history? [Kong Zi]

Very good, you got it!! Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history.

Who is an important figure in Chinese history, Kong Zi or Mickey Mouse? [Kong Zi]

Right, Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history, not Mickey Mouse!

Why is Kong Zi an important figure in Chinese history?

Kong Zi is an important figure in Chinese history because he shared his teachings on making a good society.

[closing statement, circle completed]

Extend the Learning: School-Home Connection and Class Projects, Small Group Activities, Individual Practice

SCHOOL-HOME CONNECTION
Students will ask their parents and families what they know about Chinese history. To verify, students will do an Internet search or visit a library to either research what their parents/family told them to look up or a figure from history they would like to know more about. Students will prepare a short (1-2 minutes) presentation about the person they’ve researched including visual and facts similar to those in the expert group readings.

CLASS PROJECTS
If at all possible, students should be given the opportunity to practice sharing their opinions about figures from Chinese history using their ranking sheets, sentence frames, and word banks to use as much of the target language as they can without putting a damper on the fun! (A little primary language here and there is acceptable.) This may be done by “affinity grouping” such as assigning five positions in the classroom, one for each of the five vignettes. Students form study groups by gathering in that area and signing a chart or sign-up sheet for accountability. These groups may combine to make collaborative posters comparing two of the five figures or to write a collaborative dialog between two or more of the figures from history. Debates may be the final step of this process.

KONG ZI was born approximately 2,500 years ago. Although there is no concrete evidence, his birthday is traditionally considered to be September 28, 551 BCE. He was born into a warrior family but was raised by a single mother because his father died when he was three years old. KONG ZI grew up poor and learned to do many jobs to make a living.

KONG ZI was born in Qufu City, State of Lu (now Shangdong Province). (Find on map. Qingdao is a major city there now.)

KONG ZI worked many jobs like shepherd, clerk, and bookkeeper when he became an adult. Most of all, he was a philosopher and thinker who shared his ideas with disciples. The most important thing he did was to inspire the Chinese people to live well together and make a better society. The lessons of KONG ZI emphasize personal and governmental morality, justice, and sincerity. It is believed that his teachings were learned by memory by his students, then written down in books after his death by his disciples.

The lessons of KONG ZI form an important part of Chinese culture and have occasionally been outlawed by leaders. For example, one interesting fact is that the first emperor, Qin Shi Huang, ordered his books burned and had many of Kong Zi’s disciples killed. One story says that some disciples were buried alive!
EXPERT GROUP READING #2

Qin Shi Huang (The First Emperor)

QIN SHI HUANG was born approximately 2,250 years ago.

QIN SHI HUANG was born in western Qin (now _______ Province). (Find on map. _____ is a major city there now.)

QIN SHI HUANG was a warlord who won wars with other warlords until he controlled much territory. The most important thing he did was to organize and connect these territories into one cohesive empire with himself as the first emperor. He protected this empire by connecting the smaller walls and fortresses along the northern border with Mongolia.

One interesting fact is that the first emperor, QIN SHI HUANG, was cruel and didn’t want to be judged by KONG ZI (Confucius)’s teachings, so he had all the books of the teachings of KONG ZI burned and brutally killed KONG ZI’s followers. QIN SHI HUANG made it illegal to talk about the past. He also ordered a huge terra cotta army of soldiers and horses to be buried with him in his tomb.
SUN SHANGXIANG was born approximately 1,800 years ago. She was the daughter of Sun Jian and Lady Wu, and sister of the first emperor of eastern Wu (Sun Quan).

SUN SHANGXIANG was born in Fuchun county in the Wu prefecture (now Fuyang, Jhejiang Province). (Find on map. Hungzhou is a major city there now.)

SUN SHANGXIANG was sent to marry Liu Bei, a warlord and founder of Shu Han, in the year 209 as a political alliance between Wu and Shu Han. The most important thing she did was to show that women can be brave and intelligent. Lady Sun and Liu Bei had no children. She showed political acumen when she tried to bring Liu Bei’s heir (from a previous wife who had died) back to her brother’s court. She showed intelligence when she surrendered the heir to two generals who captured her.

One interesting fact is that SUN SHANGXIANG (Lady Sun) knew the martial arts well enough to intimidate a warlord, her husband Liu Bei. It was said that Liu Bei was afraid of her and her servants because they all knew how to use weapons to protect themselves.
Admiral Zheng He

ADMIRAL ZHENG HE was born approximately 700 years ago in the year 1371. He died in 1435. He was the second son in a Muslim family that had moved to China four generations before. His great-grandfather was Persian and was sent to China in an official capacity.

ADMIRAL ZHENG HE was born in Kunyang, which is the present day Jinning in Yunnan Province. (Find on map. Kungming is a major city there now.)

ADMIRAL ZHENG HE was taken captive by the Ming forces at the age of 11. He was sent to the imperial court to be a servant. However, he became a trusted advisor to Yongle Emperor. The most important thing he did was to become the admiral of the empire’s treasure fleet of sailing ships. This was a powerful position of authority and ADMIRAL ZHENG HE controlled over 300 ships and 200,000 sailors, traveling to distant lands like India, Persia, and Arabia.

One interesting fact is that ADMIRAL ZHENG HE knew how to speak Chinese and Arabic. It is possible that his bilingual skills made him more valuable to the emperor.
